They are all examples of a belief in the axis mundi - a perceived center of the world, where Heaven and Earth are connected. This concept is also known by other names, including the 'world tree', the 'world pillar', and the 'cosmic axis'. Since ancient times, many cultures have held the view of their homeland as the center of the world, as it was the center of their known universe.

Instead of saving people from Earth, early Christians believed God was bringing Heaven and Earth together, making creation new, restoring the world from all its pathologies. "They believed that God would then raise His people from the dead, to share in - and, indeed, to share His stewardship over - this rescued and renewed creation.

Most Christians misunderstand what Heaven really is ...

The ancient Mesopotamians regarded the sky as a series of domes (usually three, but sometimes seven) covering the flat Earth. Each dome was made of a different kind of precious stone. The lowest dome of heaven was made of jasper and was the home of the stars. The middle dome of heaven was made of saggilmut stone and was the abode of the Igigi. The highest and outermost dome of heaven was made ...

Heaven and earth as sacred spaces, forces, or processes. Heaven and earth, as personified powers of nature and thus worthy of worship, are evidently not of equal age. Although from earliest times heaven was believed to be the residence of a high being or a prominent god, the earth as a personified entity is much rarer; it probably first occurred among archaic agrarian civilizations, and it continues to occur in some less industrialized societies in which agriculture is practiced.
